Blattberg takes SAC

by Paul Hirst

A late surge by the SAC presidential ticket of Charles Blattberg and Kristin Honey allowed them to extend a 5 vote lead over Chris Thiesenhausen and John Albers, and capture the SAC presidency with a convincing 1200 votes, 203 better than eventual runners up Tom Brown and Al O'Hanlon.

As the final results were being posted, Blattberg said that he was "very happy" with the outcome, although he admitted that he had been nervous as his lead, at times over 140 votes, slipped as the evening wore on, until the final nine polls were counted. New SAC VP Kristin Honey was "ecstatic, excited, and also very exhausted," by the result. In an unexpected event, the Socialist Action Slate, led by Jill Lawless and David South finished respectably with a surprising 521 votes, exceeding even their own expectations.

Blattberg stated that he was pleased with the results, and that he and Honey would do "everything in our power to follow the wishes of our students," despite the rejection of OFS, in which membership was one of his objectives, and the inconclusive vote on the funding of the Women's Centre. "We'll come out with a policy on Women's Centre funding in response to concerns of students," Blattberg told the Underground.

Blattberg won most of the profacs by wide margins, while the colleges were split - Brown winning St. Mikes and Erindale, Thiesenhausen taking Innis, Scarborough, and Trinity, and Lawless winning Architecture and an independant station at Hart House. As for his success at the profacs, Blattberg believes that they sense the need for reform, and voted accordingly.

The SAC ballots contained five refurendum questions. The two major questions concerning OFS and the Women's Centre were among questions about legal aid funding, SAC reform, and credit card subsidies.

Despite a stong 'yes' lobby, U of T undergraduates rejected membership in OFS by 2403 to 1475, ending our role in the organization when our trial membership expires st the end of this session. The Women's Centre question contained three options - club funding, base funding, or no funding. The final results were 1131 for the first option, 1030 for the second, and 1645 for no funding. This vote was non binding, but will serve as a guide to next year's board. A request by Downtown Legal Services for a $1 increase in its levy was defeated 2177 to 1688, and students overwhelmingly rejected the idea of paying an extra one-half per cent at the U of T Bookstore to subsidize the Bookstore card, by 2820 to 1113.

A referendum that SAC call a constitutional conference in the next year to reform its structure, and make it more accountable to the colleges was the only question to receive a clear 'yes' vote, winning 89 per cent of 3681 ballots, a response that gives Blattberg a strong mandate to proceed.

The voting patterns reflect suburban campus support for their own candidates, but the heavy turnout at several of the profacs may represent a desire for representation through reform, or a potential new voting block.

TA's ratify contract

by Paul Hirst

The T.A.'s have returned to work since they overwhelmingly ratified a new contract in voting last Friday. The contract was offered by administration during concilliation talks last week. The new contract contains many of the same proposals presented in the Administration's final offer of Feb. 7, including departmental grievances, the posting of job opportunities with estimates of class sizes, which were demanded along with an extra hour's pay to the union bargaining committee, grievance leave, extended maternity leave and increased pay during the second year of the contract.

In addition to these, the University has agreed to reinstate the right to individual grievances over the hiring process, and to include past T.A. experience in hiring T.A.'s for jobs, both of these being key Union demands. The Administration also agreed verbally to allow Union input into the hiring process, a move that will likely create more opportunities for U. of T. graduates. There was also a verbal contract to create a committee that would examine class size.

Not demanded by the union, but offered by administration, was a pay raise of 6.3% this year for all T.A.'s, and for next year, raises of 5% for Doctorate students, 6% for Masters students, and a 7% increase for Undergraduate students. The former wages were set at $22.80, $20.39, and $17.83 respectively.

Also negotiated was the protection of striking T.A.'s from disciplinary measures, and a recommendation of leniency for students who fully supported the strike. The only one of the Students may have to face tuition fee increases of $125 per year for the next five years, according to a report currently being circulated to all Ontario University Boards of Governors.

According to the report, first year students entering a university in 1989/90 would be paying tuition fees of $1536. A student, beginning studies in 1993/94, would be paying $2410 in tuition fees alone. By the time that student reaches fourth year, fees will reach $2791, if the report's recommendations

Committee to examine student life

What is it like being a student at Scarborough College? What are the good things about it? How could it be improved?

A committee of students, faculty, and staff hopes to find out. Its terms of reference will be to examine the undergraduate student experience at Scarborough College, with special emphasis on the first year. It will work closely with the newly appointed Advisor to the Provost on Undergraduate Education, Professor John Kirkness.

The Committee will be concerned with the following areas: High School Contacts, Admission Procedures, Summer Counselling, Orientation, Calendar, Course Selection, Curriculum Design, Counselling Services, Health Services, Athletic Facilities, Student Housing, Clubs, Study Facilities, and Social Facilities.

If you are interested in becoming a member of this Committee, please contact John Warden, Associate Dean (Academic) at 284-3124. Four students and four members of faculty are needed.

Also involved will be members from Counselling and Health Services, Residence, Athletics, the Library, Public Relations, and the Office of the Registrar. The aim of the Committee is to bring together all the different parts of the College which affect the life of the student.

Constitutional restructuring

by David Berry

Recent actions of the Social Sciences Faculty have made changes necessary in the Scarborough College Council's constitution, and have left members of other Faculties fuming. At a Jan. 17th College Council meeting, attended by what turned out to be a majority of Social Science Faculty members, a proposal to study increased limitations on the Political Science enrollment was rejected.

Prof. Miron, the Chair of Social Sciences, had sent a memo to all faculty members, asking them to "please show up and support Political Science in their time of need." The reason is given as: "It is our last chance to overturn the recommendation of Programs and Curriculum."

Prof. Nalewajko felt that "The Chair of Social Sciences gathered together his flock" and packed the meeting. She felt that what they had done was to "bully the motion through Council" without regard for other faculties or the College at large. "It was not done in the proper spirit of Council." she said.

"I didn't like the way it was railroaded through." commented Prof. Richtie. "Constitutionally, what was done was right. It was just a distasteful move."

Because of this action, a motion was passed at the Feb. 27th meeting of the Academic Affairs Committee requesting that College Council change its constitution in order to prevent what has been called "bypassing of the Committee." This would mean that a set number of faculty members from each division is elected to the Council "just like how the Academic Affairs and General Policy Committees work.

Principal Williams sees a different kind of constitutional change. He thinks that the change should make College Council act like Governing Council, which cannot overturn a ruling made by one of its boards. All it can do is approve it or send it back for further study. With College Council, all items presented to Council from a Committee could not be overturned, but could be sent back to Committee for further consideration.

There are some opponents of any constitutional change in Council at all. Prof. Rubinoff feels that any change will have "no effect on anything except to distort the system. It's punishing Social Sciences for standing up for their rights.

Prof. Krashinsky says that the change would be a "waste of time and wouldn't accomplish anything."

One student, Ricardo Mashregi, put his opinion his way: "I thought it was a downright nasty thing to do. I can see the Political Science professors' point of view. However, if that's the example they are going to set for students, then they shouldn't be surprised at the seeds they sow..."

More study space?!

by David Berry

A Study Space Committee met last week to discuss solutions to the growing problem concerning the quality of study space at the College. This committee, chaired by Prof. John Kennedy, considered proposals for study space in the Alumni Study Lounge, the ends of both H and S-wings, and the R-wing Cafe. The committee, made up by Patrick Phillips, Prof. Dick, David Berry, and Ruth-Claire Alinas, discussed several suggestions concerning the issue of study space.

Student complaints concerning poor lighting and uncomfortable cold in the S-Wing, along with noise complaints from professors trying to teach in this area, has brought about the suggestion that the furniture be moved to the H-Wing. However, it was the very same type of noise complaints, from professors with offices in the H-Wing, that prompted the original move to the S-Wing.

Patrick Phillips commented that: "There is a concern about litter that is appearing all over the place (in the study spaces). This increases the cost of Physical Plant Services (to clean it up)."

Dick felt that the Alumni Study Lounge was not being used properly. "The Alumni Study Lounge is an eatery." he said. He called the demand for more group study space "nonsense. What they need is a Common Room where they can talk to their friends." he said. "Group study space demands have already been addressed in the Library Seminar rooms."

It was noted that St. George had many Common rooms, but that Scarborough had none. Berry suggested the outer part of the Pub be used as a Common Room, while Alinas suggested a Student Center be included in the R-Wing renovatons or in Scarborough Hall. Until a Common room is made, study spaces will continue to suffer with problems like noise and litter.

The committee ended with an agreement to meet again before the next Council Meeting. Alinas and Berry agreed to draw up and distribute a study space questionairre, in order to determine study habits and opinion concerning present facilities.

Residence policies conflict

by Denis Keyes

There are discrpencies in the two Residence Admissions Policies. One came from Penelope Laycock (Residence Manager) and one was drafted by the Governing Council.

Governing Council said that students with the best academic records will be given first priority, regardless of whether these students are from out of town or from the local area. According to Governing Council, they are willing to admit a local student with a high academic status into Residence. This is quite unfair to those students from non-university towns who could not attend university without the aid of an on-campus residence.

Governing Council believes they should admit students who will benefit the University.

Penelope Laycock said, "The University is for students, and students from non-university towns should be given the opportunity to attend".

Ms. Laycock and her staff will be reviewing students applying for residence in the 1989-1990 year by, firstly, their geographical location; secondly, their grades, and thirdly, their contribution to the college and/or residence community.

In the new policy (approved by College Council on January 17, 1989), it also states that "special considerations" will override all the above criteria, whether local or non-local.

Another change took the form of an increase in the number of first year students admitted. Up to fifty percent of student village housing will be allotted to first year students. All of these will be selected by their geographic location starting from the furthest non-university towns.

Last year, first year students were chosen by their grades. First priorty was given to the highest grades. This, however is no longer the case.

The other fifty percent or so will be divided between all of the upper year students. Suitable students will be admitted according to the criteria in the new Admissions Policy.

Editorial

As T.A.'s marched ice-cold picket lines, students were getting hot. Many of us felt we were being robbed of an essential service of our education. It isn't easy to support a strike that tells us to put our education --- already paid for --- on hold. Many of us did, however, because we believed that the T.A.'s were out there in the cold fighting for us.

"Short term pain; long term gain", said the placards, and we were told through our windshields, "Hey, we're doing this for you, too".

These altruistic motives of the striking T.A.'s, however, proved a casualty in the war against underfunding.

Armed with a few cups of coffee and active support from only a handful of students and even fewer profs, the T.A.'s came out of this battle with a breastful of decorations for themselves but only a couple of "maybes" for students.

The key student issues in this strike were class size and student/T.A. ratio. This is what we got:

"A further verbal commitment was made to begin discussion of a joint committee to research class size."

Huh?

Any required monies to perhaps pay for increased numbers of T.A.'s will be funded by the budgets of already-underfunded departments. Sure they will.

"Underfunding lies behind all of these problems", said T.A. David Martzokas, "and that was really beyond the scope of this strike."

Each day that the strike continued was another day closer to finals and term-paper due dates. Many of us were beginning to feel cheated and, had the strike entered into, say, April, we might have seen a very strong and angry student backlash.

As it stands now, with the strike over before any irreparable damage was caused, we owe the T.A.'s some thanks for their efforts and their quick recognization of the futility of their gesture.

Let us give them the benefit of the doubt and say that they didn't dupe us into giving our support. In return we should expect a special effort from them with regards to helping us catch up.

Berry reacts to headline

To The Editor:

The headline in last weeks Underground was slightly misleading. The headline read "CSCR Defends Autonomy". CSCR does not have autonomy; they are connected with the students council (SCSC). Granted, they may recieve a direct fee levy from the students. But, SCSC is responsible for CSCR: financing (re: loaning money for extra equipment), handling finances, hiring the CSCR staff, and legal services.

The Underground is an autonomous body because they have no connection with any students council, and are incorporated. Until CSCR can incorporate themselves and stand on their own feet, they are not autonomous.

To The Editor:

We are writing in defence of those first year Student Village Council (S.V.C) representitives who "don't know any better". The article written by Mr. Keyes and Mr. Mashregi was fair, however, the quotes from Brent Gabbini and Murray Parks were insulting and unfounded.

If the truth be known, it is the first year members, for the most part, who fulfill their obligations to the S.V.C. This includes the supervisory shifts in the residence centre.

Apartheid:
The World's Tragedy

by Andrea Winter

Prime Minister Smuts, of the Unionist Party in South Africa, has agreed that social change must come. However, he adds that whatever the advances, social discrimination must continue. The Nationalist Party of South Africa had a clear answer. That answer was separate development: apartheid.

The Nationalist Party won the elections in 1948 and formed a government.

Since then we have seen the suppression of millions of blacks by the domination of the minority white ruling class. Throughout the '60's we saw a tightening of the apartheid laws. But the '80's see a disintegration of racial policies. The minority domination is no longer standing on a solid base. In fact, the South African state is in the process of reorganization. However, white domination is only being revised, not abolished.

As university students, we have the skills and the knowledge necessary to make a difference in the lives of the suppressed African peoples. As human beings, we owe it to the human race to do what we can to abolish this "disease" that keeps reoccurring in society. It may take on different forms but the underlying principle is the same. In this particular case the disease has been given the name "apartheid," and it has spread throughout South Africa.

Over the years, the subject of apartheid has alternated between the front and back burners of western society.

Although a few people have made it their life's work to abolish apartheid, mainstream society still views it as a problem that is "over there." Not only are we caught up in our own lives, but we don't feel that we can make a difference. However, unless we take a stand now, we may be shocked into reality. The African people have become restless, and an uprising is on the horizon. If peaceable actions aren't taken soon, we may find ourselves accomplices to violent warfare and bloodshed.

Studies of the present South African situation points to the need for us to focus our attention on economic sanctions. Capitalists in South Africa dislike operating in a siege economy, cut off from technological innovation, easy capital inflows and access to markets abroad. Anglo-American Corporation, South Africa's largest company sees "...no future for any of us aside from an African quagmire unless...we seek to have the government realize the deep concern we feel about conditions as we find them today."

For the first time, Afrikaner business, in the form of Afrikaanse Handelsinstituut, has put aside ethnic loyalties to join their English and Black colleagues in openly criticizing the government. So we have a situation in which capitalists' need for stability and productivity goes beyond ethnic boundaries. This reinforces my belief that the time to tighten up on economic sanctions is now. This will result in greater uprisings among the South African capitalists, which will create internal pressures on the government from both the blacks and whites in South Africa.

In addition there will be the outside pressures from foreign countries.

There are many, such as the U.S., who defend their continued investment by saying that many jobs to blacks would be lost should U.S. firms pull out. However, these firms constitute only 2% of the black workforce. Plus, all that economic growth has served to do is to secure the most fundamental features of apartheid.

As for the response of the Black South Africans to the economic sanctions: "...withdrawl can only mean the downfall of the Vorster regime...Black people, in general, are prepared to suffer any consequences if this means ultimate black freedom..."

So the blacks are willing to tolerate the short-term detrimental effects of the sanctions in order to achieve freedom in the long run.

Space does not allow for an elaborate discussion on economic sanctions. However, I will briefly give a broad outline which, with the help of people like yourselves, can go a long way towards achieving the main goal--the abolition of apartheid.

Ideally, the best course of action is the total cessation of all imports to south Africa by all countries. However, severe economic hardships can still be brought about if one half of South Africa's imports are stopped, especially capital equipment, which the country relies upon heavily. In the long run, South Africa's growth could, effectively, cease. A stoppage of capital inflows to the country would need to be added to this, as well as commodity specific embargoes,such as oil, for example.

All of us can help this process by influencing enough governments and businesses to enforce such sanctions to help achieve the one half reduction. We would also need to implement ways of getting trade and investment partners, who are unwilling to enforce the sanctions, to contribute by not increasing their supplies of imports. When economic sanctions are combined with diplomatic pressure on the South African government, humanitarian aid, arms embargoes and increased civil disobvedience, the foundation of apartheid will be severely weakened.

As mentioned, most people tend to push world crises to the back of their minds because they feel that they cannot make a difference. Yet each and every one of us can make a difference. First and foremost, we must educate ourselves and our constituencies, whether it be on racism, world debt, or some other crisis. University has taught us that only by educating ourselves will we have the power with which to pursue our goals, and only through patience and persistence will we attain them.

Antigone a success

by Karen R.M. Shaw

The program, for the Scarborough College Drama Workshop's production of Jean Anouilh's modernized version of Sophocles' Antigone, lists the time of the play as "the present" and the place as "Ancient Thebes." This anachronism sets the precedent for a presentation of the timelessness of tragedy.

Throughout this play, which was directed by Karlheinz Theil, the audience is continually reminded that this is an ancient play set in a modern context. An obsessive desire for religious ritual in burial is juxtaposed against secular mockery of such practices, guns are juxtaposed against swords, and Polynices is said to have driven a car. All of these reminders of the passage of time emphasize the timelessness of human desire for morality, stability, for love and for death.

Joanne Towgood adds a touch of sardonic wit to the role of the chorus. She opens the play, sets the scene, and introduces both characters and plot.

Lia Tagliamonte gives a powerful performance as Antigone, a woman compelled to uphold her ideals.

The Underground's own Tony Nappa steals the show with his "Brooklynese" portrayal of the First Guard.

In an ironic twist,the man who lives and teaches Anarchism at this school, Prof. Bill Graham, is cast in the role of the fascist dictator, Creon.

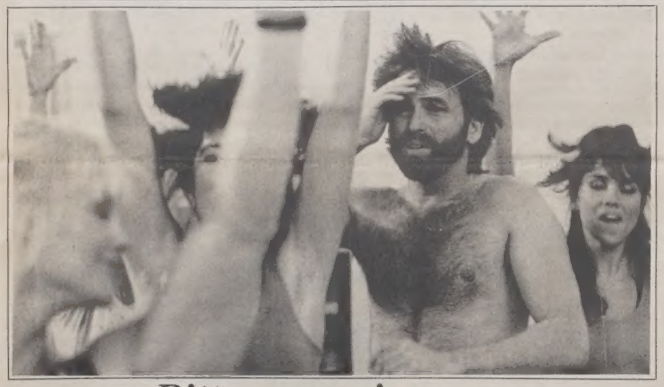
It was during the German occupation of France that Anouilh translated and modernized this Greek tragedy. This time of restriction and censorship rendered all written material, fact or fiction, subject to the scrutiny of the Nazi regime. Anouilh's version of Antigone was judged to have posed no political threat. It was not realized, until much later, that Creon was representative of the overpowering German presence and that Antigone was the idealistic innocence of France.

As a comment on society, this play is timeless. Its emphasis on the conflicting philosophies of life are as relevant today as they were in occupied France or in Sophocles' Greece. The universality of the character of Creon, who devotes his life to the "order" of the state, and of Antigone, who devotes her life to moral ideals, emphasizes an opposition that defies time. The Creons of this world are doomed to live and the Antigones can find peace only in death.

Congratulations to both cast and crew. It works!

George Chu

Creon (centre), played by Professor Bill Graham, is doomed to say "yes" to life in Anouilh's Antigone. The play was performed from March 8 to 11.



Ritter amazing

by Ayesha Kahn

Blake Edwards' newest release Skin Deep is not one of his best films. That isn't to say the movie isn't funny...it is! And that is probably what saves it from being completely boring.

Skin Deep, starring John Ritter (from Three's Company and Hooperman) as Zack Hutton, an alcoholic writer who can't write and, thus drowns his sorrowin women and drink. The story is beginning to sound like mix between Arthur and Throw Mama from the Train. It even seems like there should or could be a meaningful treatment of a man trying to cope with his alcoholic problem. However, Blake Edwards doesn't do things this way. What you do get is Ritter systematically sleeping with everyone from his mistress's hairdresser to a female bodybuilder. Interspersed between his various women he still finds time to cry on the shoulders of his bartender, analyst, lawyer, and occasionally running to his ex—wife, Alyson Reed, begging to be taken back.

The script gives the audience no sense of the depraved alcoholic Ritter is meant to portray. Yes, I know this is comedy but it is so clear that the script means to convey something more, but for some reason the most insightful comment anyone can make is that "not being able to write is as bad as not being able to screw" or, when impotency hits Ritter (for all of the big ten seconds,—you don't really believe a libido like that can be put out of commission, do you?), the comment is reversed so that "not being able to screw is as bad as not being able to write...".

Ritter's scenes with his analyst aren't much better. Their initial scenes together are essentially for flopped one—liners. Even Ritter's tearful reaction to his doctor's pronouncement that he wasn't given commandments was funnier than what we all know was supposed to be snappy patter.

When Ritter has dinner at his ex—wife's home the conversation is stiff, the audience is subjected to a total lack of chemistry between Ritter and Reed. Their arguements are flat and lifeless and their intimate scenes can be downright boring.

Reed can't play a women torn by her desire to take her husband back and the need to make a new start, and Ritter cannot play an alcoholic anythig. Ritter says it best when he tells Reed, "I am trying to solve my problems, even if it doesn't look like it." That's right it doesn't!

But despite all this it's still an incredibly funny movie. I give all that credit to Ritter. His ability to do comedy is amazing, possible a throwback from the days of Three's Company, dare I say. In fact, you can float through the entire movie on just the comedy. You may however, feel mildly bored until the next humourous scene comes up. I don't mind that tl e movie is a comic view of the alcoholic. After all, that is exactly what Arthur was. But to aspire to and then flop in that aspect is disappointing. Still comedy is Blake's forte and when he's funny he is very funny.

"Canadian"

by Diane Williams

Malarek is a Canadian film. Unfortunately, the word "Canadian," when used in reference to films or television programs appears to have become synonymous with the word "boring." No one seems to watch Canadian films or, if they do, they deny the fact. Hopefully though, this old prejudice will not prevent people from going to see Malarek.

The film, directed by Roger Cardinal, is the story of a young reporter working for the Montreal Tribune, Victor Malarek (played by Elias Koteas). On his first story for the newspaper, Victor witnesses the shooting of an unarmed youth by a police officer. This leads Victor, once a juvenile offender himself, to investigate the abuses in the system. Cardinal manages to convincingly portray Malarek's increasing frustration as each of his attempts to expose these abuses is blocked. This is one of the movie's main strengths and it keeps the viewer interested right to the end. This is not to say that the film does not have its faults. It does. For example, the flashback scene, in which Koteas, (obviously in his late twenties) portrays a seventeen-year-old Malarek, does stretch the imagination a little. However, all in all, Malarek is a movie that is certainly worth the time and the money to go and see.

Welcome to another column by the latrant rablators of A-7. (O.K. so we played "Balderdash" the other day.) Let the nonsense begin:

Rezz Rap

Having torubles at home
Don't ya know you're not alone
Run, run, run away to Rez!

Are ya siblings all from hell
And Ma and Pa do nuthin' but yell
Run, run, run away to Rez!

Is healthy food served on your plate
And you get bitched at for being late
Run, run, run away to Rez!!

Rez is great, ya can't lose,
Party all year and drink your booze
Run, run, run away to Rez!

Have your fun now with your beer
'Cause if ya fail, you're outta here.
Run, run, runaway to Rez!

1) V.P.L.-Visible Panty Lines
2) White shoes in the Winter
3) Throw away Blue eye shadows.
4) O.P.H.-Other People's Hair
5) Don't dress like I.D.S.

Thought of the Week: Do proctologists drive "Probes"???

Thoughts from the Throne:
Poor rezz students are always being solicited for money by different groups. Support this, Sponser that. However, students could exercise their idealism for free if residence proveded 'Blue Boxes' for recycling. If the blue box recycling program is in this area, residence should join it. If not, it should lobby for its implementation.

SONG OF THE WEEK
O.S.A.P. BLUES

A long winters morning
In a class bound for nowhere
I met up with a Bureaucrat
I was too poor to eat
And so I started whining
'Bout the weevils in my porridge
My great distended belly
And the green things on my feet.

He said, "Son I made a life of lending people money
Listening to sob stories until my hair turned grey.
So stop your damn complaining
And get out of my office
Don't ask for any more or I'll take it all away."
Chorus:
You've got to know when to lie
Know when to cry
Know when to change your name
And claim your folks are dead
You never count your O.S.A.P.
When you're standing in the office
There'll be time enough for counting
When you're out of the red.

Many thanks to our contributors in A-8. Please drop off any miscellaneous ramblings, poems, recepies, etc. at A-7 or the Underground Office.

7:30 Line-ups spell success for Pub says Paterson

by Ricardo Mashregi

Line-ups really aggravate me. It seems, most Thursdays, that the Pub exhibits this trait. In order to find the reasons behind this growing phenomenon, I was led to an informal chat with the Pub Manager, David Paterson.

Q. I've noticed many changes this year, within the Pub, in the form of renovations, increased services, etc. What are your comments concerning this?

A. We're having brand new sound system scheduled to arrive March 20th. The purchase of a brand new cash register, allowing for a break-down of every item sold, will help with inventory control. My long-term goals are to create a better ambiance and to purchase new chairs and tables to go with the new floor. As for the new floor, I think it's a great improvement, not to mention the hot dog stand or, as I prefer to call it, "ball park food." Also I had the walls repainted during the summer and I've kept Hendrix, at student's request. Anyway, it reminds me of my youth.

Q. Many students, including myself, feel that a $3.00 cover charge is a bit exorbitant for Thursday nights. Any possibility of lowering it?

A. First of all, S.C.S.C. decided on the cover charge. However, if I were to eliminate the cover charge, which pays for entertainment (bands, D.J.'s, comedians...), I would then like to ask the students if they would be willing to spend up to 35¢ more for a beer and up to 40¢ more for a drink. If they were to answer 'yes,' then I could eliminate the cover charge.

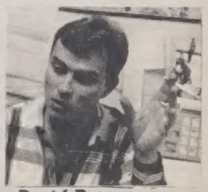
Q. You mentioned S.C.S.C. In this respect, can you tell us if you are satisfied with your relationship with the Pub Officer, Ruth-Claire Alinas and S.C.S.C. in general?

A. Ruth and I had a lack of communication this year and it's been mutual. I think we were both to blame, probably myself more more than her. But, overall, I am satisfied with our present relationship. As for S.C.S.C. members, they may have the perception that I've been uncooperative. I think they perhaps haven't seen me live up to their expectations (i.e. filling out weekly reports, etc.) because of the lack of interest or misguided interest, on their part. I think if they choose to run a liscenced establishment, they have to place onus on the manager, rather than on the governing body. What I mean is that they must understand that they're running two separate institutions: S.C.S.C. and the Pub. I believe it should remain a student business, with a designated manager to oversee and maintain fiscal responsibility and the financial stability of it's operations. At the end of the year they should use the profits for student needs.

Q. What do you believe has contributed to the success of the Pub, this past year.

A. I don't really have a definite answer, but my main objective has been to sell the Pub during the day. I think this has been achieved recently through lunch hour comedy. It's a quiet place to lunch, chat, or study. I feel that the faculty members are frequenting on a more regular basis. As for the students, I believe I'm meeting their needs. We have bands in. However, the Pub is too small for bands to come in on a regular basis. This is why I went with D.J.'s. What I wanted to do was to create a fun atmosphere and I think that's been accomplished. It makes you feel good to see them start lining up at 7:30 p.m.

Howard Yu



David Paterson

Q. In closing, is there anything you would like to say?

A. Yes, in respect to my staff: I would simply like to say that I have a great deal of confidence in them and I like them. As for the students: I hope they will come up to the Pub and give their input. Generally speaking, I've enjoyed this past year.

Upon leaving David, I walked into the Pub, on a Thursday night, to find out what students thought about the Pub. The following is the only coherent answer I could find:

"Mi diverte tutti i giovedi. Vengo per ballare e per incontrare i miei amici. La Pub e veramente magnifico!", said Louisa Occhapinti.

Letters continue...

To The Editor:

I want to express my admiration of your diligence in maintaining the Scarborough Campus newspaper. I was concerned that, after the initial dissolution of the Underground staff, the newspaper, as well as the only visible "Voice of Scarborough" campus students, would disappear entirely. Though I miss the startling, intricate art-work displayed on the cover (which I hope will soon reappear on the cover page of the Underground), I am impressed with the literary content still present in the paper. I sincerely hope that the "new" Underground will be satisfactorily established so that it will be able to continue circulation in the next academic year.

We are two of those "lazy" first year reps. who have spent many of our volunteered hours sitting in the res. centre, bored to tears, because few residents seem to utilize the facilities.

The comment that first year students "don't know any better" is a prime example of why many 'frosh' don't get involved. Do you not remember first year Mr. Parks and Mr. Gabbini.

Computer caper continues

by Marcel Saumure

Welcome to the latest installment of the continuing drama, "All My Data Bases". When last we looked in (February 28), I reported that a new computer facility for the Bladen Library was to be installed and operative on or around March 4th. Well, where is it?

Last time around, Tom Brown, handsome man-about-town, and SAC External Commissioner both confirmed and assured me that students at Scarborough Campus would finally be on equitable grounds with the other U. of T. campuses. Yes, my friends, we were to have our own universilly accessible computer room. Remember, I told you all about it.

Alas, to my great disappointment and embarrassment, I must retract that particular announcement. That's right, there is no computer facility installed as of this time. With this session nearing its end, it may be that hope for a computer room may be a lost cause for students who might need it this year.

Be sure to stay tuned next time when we might lear what your Mr. Brown meant when he snapped, "You'll get it when you get it".

Tuition increases

are accepted and if inflation is included in the calculations.

The increases, which are still under discussion, are being recommended as a means of improving the non-critical state of underfunding to Ontario post-secondary institutions.

"Our big c ncern is the implications such a propo has with regards to rising tuition fees." said OFS communications director Georgia Guy.

OFS chairperson Shelly Potter was angered by the "clandestine" nature in which the report was distributed. She said that such proposals should be disclosed to the entire student population and not just individuals on Boards of Governors.

"The forum for the discussion of this issue is in the University hallways and classrooms, not behind closed doors," she said.

TA strike over

demands not discussed was for a dental plan, which is included in all other University contracts.

The ratification of the contract by slightly over 90% of the strikers ends the two-week battle with administration until the new contract expires in August 1990.

With the victory by the T.A.'s, it may create an added impetus on behalf of administration to win the next struggle.

Scarboro voting

by Paul Hirst

Scarborough College threw its S.A.C. support behind the Chris Thesenhausen-John Albers ticket, which took 73% of the 434 votes cast at the two polling stations. The winning ticket of Charles Blattberg-Kristen Honey captured 10% of the Scarborough vote, with 45 ballots. The Tom Brown-Al O'Hanlon ticklet won 39 votes, four ahead of the Socialist Action Slate team of Jill Lawless and David Smith.

The Scarborough vote allowed the Thiesenhausen team to pull within 5 votes of the leaders with 9 polls to be counted, but strong support from the Med Sci polling station put the contest out of reach.

For the referenda,

Scarborough students tended to follow established trends. The request for a $1 increase in the levy by Downtown Legal Services was rejected by 66% of Scarborough voters, compared with a 53% rejection in the total vote. On O.F.S., the university as a whole voted 62% against membership, while Scarborough had 66% of its 413 voters reject it. The question concerning the Bookstore price raises of one-half a per-cent to subsidized credit card use was supported by 35% of Scarborough students compared to only 28% of U.of T. voters. 92% of 404 Scarborough students want fundamental reforms within S.A.C., similar to the 89%of all university voters.

On the issue of the Women's Center, the entire University had 57% support of some type of funding, and 43% opposing any funding. At Scarborough, the results were different. Only 34% of Scarborough students oppose funding, and 40% support club funding for the Women's Center.

So what does all this mean? With less than 10% of students voting at Scarborough, it is difficult to assume that these results are indicative of anything at all. However, a brief glance seems to indicate an inward-looking trend towards Scarborough, to the extent of voting for Scarborough candidates. The Theisenhausen victory at Scarborough was the most decisive of any of the polling locations.

Blattberg reaffirmed his committment to a tri-campus university, and rejected the notion that he might punish Scarborough for its lack of support.

In the longer term,

Scarborough sent the second largest number of voters to the polls, second only to Erindale. That Scarborough turned out in numbers to support their local candidate signifies that there is a significantly large voting population, something that future S.A.C. candidates might want to take notice of when selecting running mates.

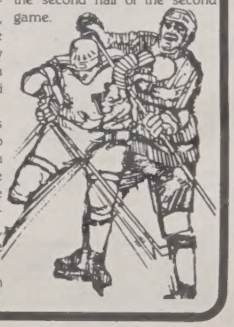
Bush Pigs take title

by Tony Nappo

League scoring champ Chris O'Brien led his pig mates to a resounding victory in the Cosom Hockey "A" championship, Tuesday evening. Despite daunting circumstances--playing two consecutive games and losing two key pigs (Mark Sutton and Steve Cooke) to an exam.--the pigs prevailed. The first game, versus the Knottlers, was a true team effort. Goals scored by Chris O'Brien (2), Mark Sutton (2), Mark Kulberg (1) and Patti Breward (3) added to 8-0 win.

Two stellar performances came from Ian Bryan, who recorded his fifth and sixth consectutive shutouts. In the second game, against the Belgium Wafflers, the perseverence of O'Brien and Kuhlburg, who played most of the game without substitution, paid off. O'Brien scored all of the goals in the 3-0 victory. After the games, an ecstatic Smut Pig was quoted as saying "The girls didn't stink, either."

Steve Cooke, who jeopordized a possible career in Organizational Behaviour by rushing through his exam, provided some much-needed defense in the second half of the second game.



Women's hockey team finishes with only one loss

by Julie Stockwell

The Women's hockey season has once again drawn to a close. This year, Scarborough joined with Victoria to form one team. The Scarb/Vic combo finished the season first overall, with an impressive record of 9-1 , losing only to Erindale.

In playoff action, Scarb/Vic defeated Meds in the quarter-finals by a score of 6-0. The team then defeated Phys. Ed by a close score of 2-1 in the semis. On Fri. March 3, the final playoff game was held. The team had a chance to avenge its loss to Erin, whom whey faced that morning.

It was not to be. After the first period of play, the only things to go into the net were defensemen Jen Nettleton, followed by her partner Julie Stockwell. The second period saw Erin. score 2 quick goals to go ahead 2-0. Scarb/Vic got on the board with a goal by defenseman Linda Taylor, on a rebound from Leslie Lang.

The Scarb. team would like to thank its Vic teammates, without whom the season would not have been, and also the awesome and courageous fans who braved the early morning cold to come and cheer us on. We'll get 'em next year!

Water polo team starts well in finals

by Pat Fitzgerald

The Scarborough Campus Water Polo team defeated Pharmacy 11-5 in the first of a three game final series. The game began as a rather physical match; both teams made frequent substitutions. Pharmacy managed to hold the Scarborough team at bay for the first quarter, matching their efforts goal for goal.

In the second quarter, though, the Scarborough defense regrouped and were able to hold Pharmacy to a total of 5 goals.

Top scorers for Scarborough were Richard Wells, Tom MacKay, and Al Stoner. Other outstanding players included John Souley and Andrew Tracy.

Busing through Belize

by Peter Toivlainen

Standing with my back to the Caribbean Sea, I look over the town that I have spent the last forty-eight hours visiting. Within the field of my view are a Kingdom Hall, a Methodist Church and school, a Baptist Church and a retreat, a Catholic Church, two other churches and a Mannonite mission. A dory pulls up and docks, disembarking three nuns and a priest. A van full of Mennonites arrives to greet them. I feel like I'm either caught in the middle of a religious convention, or I must be visiting the town of Punta Gorda in Southern Belize. Belize, (old British Honduras until independence in 1981) is a small country bordering Mexico, Guatemala, and the Caribbean Sea. Populated by only 180,000 people and encompasing only 8,600 sq. miles, Belize tends to get lost within the countries of Central America. It seemed like the perfect place to take a cheap vacation, so I decided to do it.

I'll start this travel log in the town of Chetumal, Mexico, on the northern border of Belize. At the bus station in Chetumal, I had the choice of two bus lines into Belize. Batty bus lines or Venus bus lines. I chose to ride Batty bus lines to Belize city, 105 miles away. The fare was $7.00 Bel. or 8,000 pesos, ($3.50 U.S.). The bus was a clean BlueBird with schoolbus seating. The first stop was at the border where, on the Mexican side, your tourist card is collected, and your passport stamped. On the Belize side you fill out a visitors card and get your passport stamped for the length of your stay. A thorough search is made of your luggage. After clearing customs, the bus passes through Corozal town. A town rebilt after a 1955 hurricane wiped it off the map, Corozel spirts 8,000 people, most of whom work in the sugar industry.

Accomodation can be had at Nesters for $12.50 Bel. After leaving Corozal, the bus heads toward Orange Walk Town. Within ten miles of Orange Walk, the road is literally covered in sugarcane that has fallen off the trucks. As the bus stops for a 15 minute rest break, the bus and passengers are almost outnumbered by small kids selling food out of plastic buckets. Hot boiled corn, tamales, bean filled penatas, Coke, Sprite and the Belizean favorate: Strawberry Fanta. Caught with my camera buried in my duffle bag, I missed a chance to photograph an exceptional young man. Having no legs, he palmed himself around on a skateboard. He scooted up, bought some food and disappeared before I could find my camera. I didn't stay in Orange Walk Town, but is was the cleanest town I saw in Belize.

The bus then headed toward Belize City and, the closer we got, the worse the road became. The bus stopped almost every mile to pick up passengers. Finally the bus pulled up at the Batty bus building, across the canal from the bus station. With a population of 50,000, this is the biggest city in Belize. Walking around in daylight, with other Canadian tourists, I still felt uneasy about Belize city. When I saw a cab driver selling Canadian and American passports, my uneasyness grew. If you decide to stay, good lodgings can be found at the Hotel Mopan at $52.50 Bel. a night. Too rich for my blood. As I pondered a billboard that proclaimed "SAY NO TO DRUGS, DRINK 7UP", I decided to move on. I went to the bus station and bought a ticket to Punta Gorda aboard a Z-Line, another bus company that operates routes in the south of the country. The fare was $16.50 Bel. ($8.25 U.S.) for a distance of 205 miles. I turned down the choice of flying by Maya Air from Belize City to Punta Gorda because of the cost - $90.00 Bel. (one way). By taking the bus, I get to pass through 80% of the remaining towns in Belize. As we leave Belize City, my uneasiness fades away. The road to Belmopan, the capital city is the best paved road in Belize. The truth of the matter is that the Western Highway was repaved before the Queen's visit to Belize several year ago. She had to travel by road on the Western Highway. So the 52 miles to Belmopan fly by in an hour and a quarter. Along the way, the hills/mountains of Belize get closer, what a beautiful sight.

Belmopan is a drab concrete block town, of about 4,000 civil servants. The bus pulled into the market square. More Kids surround the bus peddling food. From here you can transfer to Novellos Bus lines for trips toward San Ignacio, or to the ruins in Tikal, Guatemala. There was some excitement as the bus driver found out that one of the passengers had commited suicide en route with a drug overdose. We had to swing by the hospital to remove the corpse. Onward from Belmopan to Dangriga, a distance of 52 miles, we head down the Hummingbird Highway. The road deteriorates rapidly. I guess the Queen didn't visit Dangriga. The bus plunges into the hills. The mountains are absolutely the epitome of beauty.

A common sight are the vast plantations of oranges and grapefruit, something the Belizeans call 'citrus'. After three hours of rutted dirt road the bus pulls into Dangriga. Dangriga is a costal town of 7,000. The place to stay is the Hotel Riverside at $20.00 Bel. a night. I had to change buses in Dangriga, for the Z-Line bus that would take me to Puna Gorda. The bus plunges onto the dreaded Southern Highway, a goat-track posing as a usable road. The concrete and steel bridges rapidly give way to log bridges of questionable strength. The villiages are composed of thatched huts. It is a surprising thing to see the thatched huts with brand new Coca-cola or Pepsi signs outside, indications of what can be bought inside. In the middle of one citrus plantation was a concrete building, outside was a sign that stated: Built by the residents of Little Creek with the assistance of the Kiwanis Club, Ottawa Canada. The next stop, after three hours on the road was Independent City, which labels itself: THE BANANA CAPITOL OF BELIZE'. The third-world atmosphere was broken by the satellite dishes priated American Cable T.V. Leaving Independence City, a sign written in creole says "TENK YU, UNA COM BAK QUIK". By this time my bum was asleep. The bus stopped about every mile to pick up people at the roadside. In the dark, we almost ran over an Indian who was unconcious and drunk in the road. After another three hours, we pulled into the hup of the Toledo District of Belize. Punta Gorda is a town of 3,600 Caribs, Creoles, Maya, Ke'Kchi Indians, East Indians and Chinese. It looked a lot better in the daylight the next morning.

Punta Gorda WHERE TO STAY
- Fosters Hotel - $12.00 Bel. a night
- Mahungs Hotel - $12.50 Bel. a night
- St. Charles Inn - $37.00 a night *(hot water and T.V.)
- Chet's Guest Houses $30.00 a night

WHERE TO EAT
- Lux - (beans, rice, chicken) $5.00 Bel.
(eggs, ham, toast, coffe) $5.00 Bel.
- Bobby's (chicken and chips) $6.00 Bel.
(fish and chips) $9.00 Bel.

Rum - $3.00-$4.00 U.S. a bottle

WHAT TO DO
- Fishing charters, swimming, visiting ruins/archeological sighis, mixing with the locals, drinking with the British Soldiers. Taking the ferry to Guatemala (the same one that capsized last New Years costing 60 lives) for $5.00 Belize.

While I was down in Punta Gorda, I shared stories with two hosers from Saskatoon, a hitch-hiker from Montreal, Two Danes canoeing around Central America, an American from Denver, and countless others I can't remember. Belize is the place to visit, English is the official language, and you can live, travel, and eat for about $125.00 U.S. for a whole week.

GETTING TO BELIZE:

Top ten reasons to attend The Underground's end of year party:

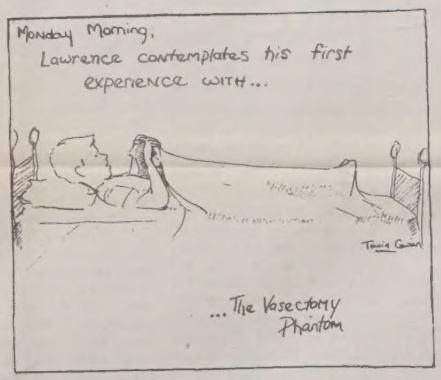
10. The ghost of Elvis will be slinging drinks.
9. Special Rock'em Sock'em Robots grudge match: Rushdie vs Khomeini.
8. All of your Saturday classes have been cancelled!!
7. Ricardo Montalban/Herve Villechaise reconcilliation.
6. Dan Quayle will be doing table dancing.
5. Special guest computer hacker will add two pointsto the GPA of every guest.
4. To point your finger and laugh at the boneheads who make this rag.
3. Phone sex with Barbara Amiel (Oh, I'm sorry thats from yesterdays list: Top ten reasons to go to the Sun's end of the year party).
2. "Who's the Boss" rerun. It's the one where Tony Danza acts like an asshole.

And the number one reason to attend the end of the year party:

1. BEAN DIP! BEAN DIP! BEAN DIP!

The Lighter Side Of Scarborough Campus....

"I wasn't always a conservative either. I used to be a Nazi.



"It's not my factory that's polluting the lake. It's all those dead fish that're doing it."
